WHAT THE BOARD SHOULD KNOW

Thursday, 25 May 2017

"No risk, no gain" goes a popular slogan. Although Board members, senior managers and shareholders know that there are strategic advantages to taking risks in a business environment and that realizing growth requires taking a certain degree of risk, it is essential to strike a balance!

Should the Board be directly involved in managing risk or should the role of the Board be limited to risk oversight of management and corporate issues that affect risk? Whatever the answer, taking a focussed approach to Risk Management by the Board should be more than a compliance mechanism. Today's complex and volatile commercial, business and political climate demands that Boards step up their game with an intense focus on Risk management. Failure to do so can have disastrous consequences.
